

TOP 5 INSTAGRAM ACCOUNTS FOR DIVERS

Whether you just got on Instagram or are a seasoned social media addict (but you can quit anytime, right?) there are lots of ocean photo accounts, scuba diver accounts, and even dive magazine accounts to follow. But after a long look at the many accounts @Splash_Water_Sports follows, we've narrowed down our favorite accounts to 5. Our categories for choosing were:

- ❑ Best quality
- ❑ Frequency of posts
- ❑ Uniqueness of photos

1. @ocean_magazine

Ocean Magazine is a great source of sea life photos of fish and marine mammals. They have a diverse range of locations from which they get their photos and credit all photographers. They're very useful in promoting lesser known photographers with great pictures to get their names out and help promote awareness of the beauty in our blue planet.

2. @thomaspeschak

Thomas Peschak is a National Geographic Photographer, the Director of Conservation Save our Seas Foundation, and Associate Director Manta Trust. Thomas is living the dream life for any of you avid underwater photographers, traveling across the world, diving all the time, and taking pictures of it all. He is very involved in ocean conservation and is an excellent speaker as anyone who has seen his TED talk would know. He has excellent quality and variety in his photos.

3. @projectaware

Project Aware is one of, if not the, largest ocean conservation organizations. They are focused on coral reefs, sharks, and how protecting our oceans can be fun! They've got plenty of apparel to advertise your care for the seas and when you get a PADI certification you can get a Project Aware card.
